

TRANSCRIPT: Emma's sister's role in the family

Emma's sister is nearly five years younger and Emma is very protective and very attached to her. If she thinks someone's gonna touch her or take her away, she becomes very upset. Her sister's very protective of her and, although they fight and disrespect each other as sisters would normally, her sister would defend her to the end.

Emma's sister obviously had to grow up and become independent more quickly than she would have had to. There's nearly a five year difference but she's always been more of the big sister than the little sister. And she very quickly became confident and self-assured, which did have a bit of a backlash when she went to primary school because she was a little bit bossy and that didn't always go down well with other children. So, she had to learn that she wasn't always expected to be in charge, and couldn't always be in charge.
